

Deaths

ORMSBY D. EBERTS
Ormsby D. Eberts, prominent Tyrone citizen, died at his home, 102 East Thirtieth street, on Saturday evening at 9:35 o'clock following an extended illness.

Mr. Eberts was born at Martha Furnace, Centre county, on February 27, 1867, the son of James A. and Nancy Williams Eberts. On May 28, 1891, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Miles, a daughter of John Q. Miles, a former treasurer of Centre county. Mr. Eberts taught school in Houston township, Centre county, for twelve years, later going into the general merchandise business at Martha Furnace which he successfully conducted for a period of 28 years. A number of years ago he retired from active business and with his family moved to Tyrone.

He is survived by his widow, and these daughters: Mrs. C. G. Cronister, Wilkesburg; Mrs. J. W. McKinney and Miss Evelyn Eberts, Tyrone, also four grandchildren. He is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. C. E. Spachman, of Martha Furnace, and Mrs. J. B. Miles, of Port Matilda.

Funeral services will be held at the Eberts home on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, followed by burial in Eastlawn cemetery, Tyrone.

ALBERT ROWE
Albert Rowe, of 179 Cooper avenue, Johnstown, Pa., died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Marks, 1522 Pennsylvania avenue, on Sunday night at 10:15 o'clock following a four months' illness with a complication of diseases.

Mr. Rowe was a son of Martin and Rebecca Rogers Rowe and was born at Tyrone Forge on November 15, 1869. On June 12, 1892 he was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Fink, of Hannah Furnace, Centre county.

He is survived by the widow, two daughters, Mrs. Harry Adams, of Clearfield and Mrs. Mary Lyberger of Johnstown; also one brother, John Rowe, of Bellwood, and one sister, Mrs. Andrew Kustenbender, Tyrone; also six grandchildren.

He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, a charter member of the Citizens Fire company of Tyrone, and Camp No. 270, P. O. S. of A., of Johnstown.

Funeral services will be held at the Marks home on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. F. A. Edmond of Johnstown, followed by burial in Eastlawn cemetery.

SOVIET RUSSIA WARNED TO END RED

The administration, it was recalled, was criticized in many quarters for having made a mistake at the time it extended recognition to the Soviet regime. To sever diplomatic relations on the grounds that the Soviet government had failed to live up to its pledges would, it was conceded, leave the administration in the position of having admitted its mistake. With national election campaigns in the offing, administration leaders were unwilling to do so.

Homarus Americanus

By CAPT. T. ORDIORNE
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

BENT SAUNDERS chugs into Skulpin Cove in his lobster boat, puts his day's catch aboard the skiff and skulls ashore. A stranger at the landing hails him. "I say, captain, I would like a half dozen or so of your legal size Homarus Americanus."

Bent straightens up and growls: "What in 'ell you drivin' at?" "I said I wished to purchase a half dozen Homarus Americanus. I presume you refer to them as lobsters."

"All engaged. None to spare," Bent tells him. "When he gets home he asks his daughter what Homarus Americanus has got to do with lobsters. She tells him it's Latin."

Sixty miles we will go to a big city where live Lydia Hawkins and her widowed mother. Capt. Abel Hawkins, an old coastwise skipper, had left his wife and daughter comfortably well off. We find Lydia, at twenty-five, a teacher of French in the high school.

For a year she had been running around with a young man named Knowles. He drew a fair to middling salary with a big hardware concern, and had kept an eye on the stock market. He had run a shoeing into a bank roll and was some ten grand to the good. So he and Lydia plan to wed the next June.

Apple blossom time comes along and grassy June is just over the horizon. Then one evening A. Benton calls.

"Lydia," said, "I have lost every dollar I had in the world and this morning I was given a month's notice at the office. I give you back your promise. I can't marry you now."

Lydia Hawkins liked A. Benton for himself and didn't have the slightest idea of hearing him over just because he'd gone broke. "Bent Knowles, you damn lobster! You're squealin' like a stuck pig. Where in h—l are your guts?" "No woman can talk to me like that," he tells her. "I thought you were a lady." He steps to the hall, grabs his hat and is gone.

A. Benton goes home to his room, sits him down and considers. It was all off so far as Lydia Hawkins was concerned. Next day he boards a bus and turns up at his Uncle Benton Saunders' cottage at Skulpin Cove. After a good lobster supper, pipes going, A. Benton tells Uncle Bent his troubles.

"Benton," he says, "do you think you can haul a lobster pot? We'll rig forty more pots and I'll let you in on shares."

Lydia Hawkins misses A. Benton and is sorry she lit on him so hard. She waits and waits but no word comes from him. In the meantime, she runs afoul of Prof. Alvin Barstow, who teaches Latin. One night he asks her to marry him. There is a lot about the professor that she likes. So she tells him that she needs time to think the matter over. But all the time she's hoping to hear from A. Benton.

Professor Barstow invites Lydia to go for a day's outing to a place down on the North Shore called Skulpin Cove. There they can procure some Homarus Americanus fresh from the sea.

One morning they make an early trip to Skulpin Cove. "What a day," says Lydia. "We've got to go fishing!"

She hires a dory and drops her keel outside of the breakers on Raggy Neck. They have luck. Lydia makes a move to haul in the grab and row ashore with the professor when she sees she has anchored in too close to the point. Just then a motherly old sea curdles over, the dory capsizes and Lydia and the professor are hove out.

The dory is bottom up but the grab holds. Lydia holds the professor by the collar, swims the few strokes to the dory, and hangs on. She has seen a fisherman in a power boat headed for the capsized dory, driving hard. He shuts off, reverses to a standstill, and helps the girl and the professor aboard.

As Lydia straightens up she says: "Gosh, Bent, your old boat sinks like h—l!" Then she wraps her bedraggled self around that fisherman and sobs for joy.

Bent Saunders, working in his fish house, sees them coming up from the landing. "Well, I'll be dod-diggered!" says Bent. "It's old Homarus Americanus!"

They dump the professor into his car. Bent takes the wheel and streaks it for his house. He strips the professor, wraps him in blankets and telephones for old Doc White.

A. Benton and Lydia come home in Bent's truck. What talk they have is not set down.

Professor Barstow and Lydia Hawkins drove back to the city next afternoon. He leaves her at her door and drives away without a word. He never calls again.

That evening, tobacco burning free, A. Benton tells Uncle Saunders the story. "She's got the right stuff in her," Saunders tells A. Benton. "Don't let her git away ag'n."

There are more matches made and mended long shore with the aid of salt water than are made and mended at country clubs with the aid of gin.

Labor Hails Important New Laws This Year

Labor Day, 1935, finds several new labor measures on the federal statute books. And labor honors these men, among others: Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, for the Guffey-Snyder coal control bill for bituminous mines; Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio, for the rail pensions act; Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, for the Wagner labor relations bill, creating a labor board with power, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who has been a consistent advocate of a social security measure. And, of course, chief respect is paid to President Roosevelt and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Hamilton Death Marks Finish of Notorious Dillinger Gang

By Edward O. Mayl
Staff Correspondent

Washington, Sept. 2 (INS)—Edward Green died April 11, 1934, at St. Paul from bullet wounds inflicted in a fight with police.

Hamilton lived to be 35 years old and was the senior partner and reputed brains of the Dillinger gang. He was perhaps the most thorough and intelligent bank robber in the country, according to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Justice Department Division of Investigation.

Hamilton's body was found by "G" men in an abandoned sand-pit in Kane county, Ill., near Aurora, about 30 miles west of his Chicago haunts. Above the rude grave was an amateurish placard bearing the legend: "Do not remove."

Justice agents believe Hamilton was fatally shot in the spring of 1934, either at the gun battle at the Little Bohemia roadhouse near Rhinecland, Wis., or in a subsequent battle at St. Paul.

All his pals in the Dillinger gang followed him to an untimely death at the hands of Federal agents within the year.

John Dillinger, reputed chief of the gang went down in front of a Chicago movie house while attempting to pull his "rod."

Lester M. Gillis, better known as Baby Face Nelson was fatally shot Nov. 27, 1934 at Barrington, Ill., in a battle in which Agents Carter Baum and H. E. Hollis were slain.

J. P. Chase, partner of Nelson in the Barrington battle, is serving a life sentence at the Federal prison on Alcatraz Island, Calif. Homer van Meter was killed by police at St. Paul, Aug. 23, 1934.

Tommy Carroll was killed at Waterloo, Ia., June 7, 1934.

DIRIGIBLE BUILDING IS OPPOSED BY U. S. NAVY

A dirigible, on the other hand, costs about forty times as much as a flying boat, takes twenty times as many men to operate, must have a costly hangar, can fly only in good weather, is very difficult to tie up, is a slow, easy target and can't fight for sour apples.

The arguments of the Navy dirigible supporters used to be that the rigid air ships were invaluable for long distance scouting; that they could fly greater distances than planes and therefore could pick up an enemy fleet near the enemy's base and give its own fleet the enemy's disposition and course, invaluable information even if the dirigible was shot down.

These arguments were blasted last spring during the Fleet's Pacific maneuvers when four squadrons of flying boats winged their way from Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, to Midway Island 1300 miles, and returned. One stop, at French Frigate Shoals, was made by all squadrons enroute to Midway, but coming back one squadron flew non-stop Midway to Pearl Harbor.

And for four days and nights, in good weather and bad, the boats operated from their anchorage at Midway, flying several times 600 miles to sea and return in search of the "white" fleet. They were part of the "black" fleet's scouting force.

In these operations of the squadrons, totaling 43 boats, one boat with all hands—two officers and four men—was lost and two disabled. Crews of the latter were recovered, although one of the boats sank.

Education makes a man conscious of his personality, and impatient of the artificial distinction founded upon wealth or birth.

NEWS BRIEFS

Newsy Notes From All Over the Country

Haverford, Pa., Sept. 2 (INS)—It's a merry vacation season for the four sons of Gov. and Mrs. George H. Earle this year.

George, 4th, the eldest, who is 18, left the family home here with his mother for a month's trip to Europe as a reward for passing Harvard entrance examinations.

Hubert, 16, and more studious than his older brother, is passing a good part of the summer at home, indulging in tennis—his favorite sport. Larry, almost 12, is showing decided preference for fishing. He spent several weeks at a New England camp, seeking a pet dog to obtain funds for tackle.

While he probably hasn't much to say in the matter, six-year-old Ralph is in Maine with a governess, specializing in building sand castles, getting lost and other beach activities.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 (INS)—More indications of improving business were seen in a business check-up here.

An eight per cent increase was reported in check clearings over last year; railroad freight business was characterized as "considerably better" and retail sales were shown to be on the up grade.

Warm weather demand for summer clothing was held responsible for an increase in both dollar volume and the number of transactions in retail selling and for an improvement in wholesale business.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 2 (INS)—Joseph Jennison didn't accomplish much good by running away from the scene of a poker game when it was to be raided—in fact, he suffered from it.

As Jennison explained it, he was playing in a penny-ante game when the police arrived. The players left their game and ran. Jennison said he saw the police radio car come up on the sidewalk and as he jumped to get out of the way, the machine struck him.

So Jennison was fined not only $1 on a gambling charge, but also suffered a knee injury. He was thinking of threatening the city with a damage action.

Easton, Md., Sept. 2 (INS)—President Roosevelt and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd have accepted invitations to attend the opening of the new $1,000,000 drawbridge across the Choptank river, near here, probably on October 12.

The date, now tentative, is expected to be confirmed later. The bridge is constructed of steel and concrete and will link the towns of Trappe in Talbot county and Dorchester in Dorchester county.
